

ENTP “The Inventor”

The ENTP’s primary interest in life is understanding the world that they live in. They are constantly gathering ideas and images about the situations they are presenting in their lives. The ENTP has a deeper understanding of their environment than any of the other types.

This ability to understand people and situations puts the ENTP at an advantage in their lives. They generally understand things quickly and with great depth. They are also quite flexible and adapt well to a wide range of tasks. They are good at most anything that interests them. As they grow and develop their abilities, they become very aware of possibilities and this makes them quite good at solving problems.

ENTP’s are idea people. They get excited and enthusiastic about their ideas and are able to spread their enthusiasm to others. They are good communicators, quick thinkers, and enjoy debating ideas with others.

In general, ENTP’s are upbeat and look at the possibilities. They become excited about concepts, challenges, and puzzles. When presented with a problem, they’re good at improvising and quickly coming up with a creative solution. Creative, clear, and curious, they have a broad range of possibilities in their lives.
